NCCA will present a distance learning class in June for rural-focused, community development financial institutions seeking to grow their business

Financing Rural Water Systems Clean, safe, water is a key part of economic development in rural areas, and one of the most difficult to bring about. Rural focused CDFIs can make fundamental contributions to their communities by doing the challenging and risky financing deals that make water treatment and wastewater facilities possible. Join this class presented by experts at Rural Community Assistance Corporation (www.RCAC.org) to learn an overview of this work giving examples of deals and the positive contribution made to the well-being of the community.
